Coester's Cuentos de la América Española

is a collection of seventeen stories about Spanish America by Spanish-American authors. The selection is representative of the best South American literature, including stories by fifteen authors from nine different countries. The stories are related in idiomatic Spanish and have an intrinsic interest as well as an educational value. For third year in high schools and second year in colleges.

Ewart's Cuba y las Costumbres Cubanas is an unusual elementary Spanish reader in that it has as its subject Cuba, the Spanish-American country with which our commercial and political relations are closest. It presents the viewpoint of a traveler, and gives some insight into native customs centering about the Christmas holidays, the carnival season, and other festivals. For first or second-year Spanish in secondary schools and first year in colleges.
